

Foster Undercounter

Is it design or is it architecture? In any case, it is genuine Foster by Duravit. Sensational, like all his work: Stansted Airport in London and Chek Lap Kok Airport in Hong Kong, the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank and the new German Reichstag. Once again, the architect and designer Norman Foster has excelled himself and created a bathroom suite that pushes the boundaries, which defines the bathroom anew. How has he done this? Quite simply. Two adjacent circles define the geometry of the whole range. Plus the archetype of two cupped hands scooping fresh water.

The geometry of two circles characterizes the range, from the washbasin to the bidet. Foster provides an exemplar of functional design-design that transcends its basic purpose. The basin rim: finely remodelled. The bowl: generously proportioned.
